ORIGINS

The Italian Bruno surname has a few possible sources. It is a patronymic name created from the originally Germanic personal name Bruno. It evolved as a nickname from the Italian word "bruno," meaning "brown," referring to the hair color or perhaps complexion. It may also have evolved as a habitational name from a place name, such as Bruno, in Asti province.

ANCIENT HISTORY

The name Bruno hails from Italy, and from the region of Tuscany in particular. Until the 12th century, surnames were nearly unheard of. People only had one name because that was all that was required to distinguish people from one another. As the population grew, however, it became necessary to give people an extra name to distinguish them from one another. At first, these names were individual and were not passed on from father to child, but eventually this practice also caught on and surnames became hereditary. At first, surnames were taken almost solely by members of the nobility. Eventually, even country folk took surnames and by the 15th century, nearly everyone had one. The name Bruno was traced to its source in Florence (Italian: Firenze), originally the capital of Tuscany, then capital of the kingdom of Italy. The Bruno or Bruni family were originally from Arezzo but this part of their early history is not traceable. The Brunelli family are on record in Venice from 1151. During the 11th and 12th centuries the family branched from Florence south to Norman dominated Sicily where Giovanni di Bruno held a castle in Palermo in 1282.

SPELLING VARIATIONS

Nearly all European surnames have several spelling variations; because only scribes and church officials could read and write at the time, names were usually spoken, not written and therefore had no fixed spelling and were written as they were pronounced. Italian surnames have a disproportionately large number of variations in comparison to names from other languages. The names Bruno, Bruni, di Bruno, di Bruni, Bruni, Bruno, Bruna, Brun, Brunelli, Brunelli, Brunello, Brunello, Brunella, Brunella, Brunellèschi, Brunelleschi, Brunetti, Brunetti, Brunetto, Brunetto, Brunini, Bruntti, Brunotti, Brunne, Brunone, Brunacci, Brunazzi, Brunaldi, Brunati, Brunato, Brunatti, Brunengo, Brunengo, Bruneri, Bruneri, Brunero, Brunaccini, Brunamonti, Brunero, Brunese, Brunese, Brunod, Brunri, Brunori and, are all variations on the name Bruno and all share the same origin.

EARLY HISTORY

Tuscany is a beautiful region in north-west central Italy. It is named after the Etruscans, who were the original inhabitants of the area in the 3rd and 4th centuries BC, making it one of the longest-inhabited regions of Italy. The first millennium or so of its history are relatively peaceful; it was not until the 12th century that the area became fragmented as a result of the struggle between the papacy and the Roman emperors. The strife that ensued was not particularly detrimental to the cultural development of Tuscany however. Rather, it in fact inspired works of genius from many sources, and Dante Alighieri in particular. His work "La Divina Commedia" ("the Divine Comedy") is studied throughout the world to this day.

In the 15th and 16th centuries, Tuscany came under the control of the Medici dynasty. Alessandro de'Medici became the Duke of Florence in 1530 and politically, Tuscany remained stable for nearly two hundred years. However, in 1735, when the Duke Gian Gastone was overthrown by the family of the Hapsburgs headed by the Empress Maria Theresa. Francis of Lorraine, who was Maria Theresa's husband, was given the position of Duke in exchange for the territory of Lorraine, which had been previously taken away from him. Their son, Leopold turned out to be one of the most notorious and successful leaders in the history of Tuscany. The Bruno family originated in Florence where they held a family seat and seated at the castle of Teraia before 1360. No date is given for the erection of the castle but the history implies they held it for at least two centuries before that date. During the 14th and 15th centuries this family branched to Forli, Fratta, Verona, and Chieri where they held territories and were recorded on the tax rolls. One prominent member of the Bruno lineage in the 15th century was Filippo Brunelleschi, an architect in Florence, who has left much evidence of his work around Florence, including the dome of the Cathedral of Santa Maria Novella, the Pazzi Chapel, and the plan for the church of Santa Maria degli Angeli. Leonardo Bruni (d. 1444), was a great humanist and statesman in Florence. His tomb can be seen today in Florence in the church of Santa Croce. During the Renaissance Francesco Bruni was an ecclesiastic in Florence and a good friend of the famous authors Boccaccio and Petrarca. Enrico Bruni of Asti, born in the 14th century, dedicated his life to the church; Antonio Brunelleschi was a priest in Florence in 1467; Francesco Bruni of San Severino was a well known author and mayor of Macerata in 1493; Giordano Bruno (1548-1600) was a philosopher and scientist born at Nola near Naples; Domenico Bruni was a comic actor in Bologna in 1580.

EARLY NOTABLES

Prominent among members of the family was Leonardo Bruni (or Leonardo Aretino) (c. 1370-1444), an Italian humanist, historian and statesman; often called the first modern historian; Antonio Bruni of Manduria was a famous poet around 1600; Domenico Bruni (c. 1600-1666), an Italian painter of the Baroque period; the Brunelli family in Rome produced a Cardinal who was known for his extraordinary intelligence; Antonio Brunelli (1577-1630), an Italian composer and theorist of the early Baroque period; in 1681 Diego Brunaccini was made Prince of the reign of San Todaro in Sicily; Lazaro Brunetti was Captain of the knights for the Grand Duke of Tuscany during the 17th century; Giacomo Brunaccini was a baron and owned vast estates in 1710; the Brunamonti family were official nobility of Assisi; members of the Brunati family in Turin were barons at this time; Sebastiano Brunetti (died 1649), an Italian painter active in his native Bologna; and Boccaccio Brunelleschi was known for his strong defense of his castle near Florence where he fought off the Pisan army three times.

THE GREAT MIGRATION

In 1799, French forces entered Florence and forced the dukes into exile, thereby gaining a powerful hold on Tuscany. The Tuscans revolted however and destroyed most of the French influence in the region. The Italians, with the help of the Austrians regained Florence, but it was only to be lost again to another French force headed by Napoleon. In 1801, Tuscany became the kingdom of Etruria by the Treaty of Luneville and then it became part of the French Empire in 1808. After the Congress of Vienna in 1815, there was a movement for Italian national unity. A revolution began in 1848 in Vienna and in 1861, the Kingdom of Italy was established.

The Ancient Arms of

Bruno

SYMBOLISM

INTRODUCTION

In the feudal states of the Holy Roman Empire, that at one time encompassed most of eastern Europe, it was especially important to be able to identify enemies from allies because of the many conflicts that occurred there. A system of heraldry evolved that achieved this. It regulated what arms were borne, and allowed each of the Italian knights to be distinguishable from others.

An Achievement of Arms such as the Bruno arms depicted on the left typically consists of these parts: the Escrolls, displaying the family motto and name, the family crest (if any) seen above the helmet, the actual Coat of arms (also known as 'arms,' or 'the shield'), the Helmet depicted below the crest, the Torse on top of the helmet, and the Mantle draped from the helmet. Each of these elements will be described below. Supporters were a later addition to the Achievement; they are somewhat rare, and are usually personal to the grantee.

The mantle was spread over and draped from the helmet and served as a protection, 'to repel the extremities of wet, cold, and heat, and to preserve the armour from rust.' The numerous cuts and slits suggest that it had been torn and hacked on the field of battle. The style or design of the mantling is up to the individual heraldic artist, and it is usually depicted in the main color and metal from the shield. The helmet (or Helm) varied in shape in different ages and countries, often depicting rank. The Esquire's Helm, as depicted here, is generally shown silver, with a closed visor and facing to the dexter (its right). On top of the helmet is a Torse or wreath which was formed by two pieces of silk twisted together. Its purpose was to hold the crest and mantle on the Helm.

MOTTO

The motto was originally a war cry or slogan. Mottoes first began to be shown with arms in the 14th and 15th centuries, but were not in general use until the 17th century. Thus the oldest coats of arms generally do not include a motto. Mottoes seldom form part of the grant of arms: Under most heraldic authorities, a motto is an optional component of the coat of arms, and can be added to or changed at will; many families have chosen not to display a motto.

The coat of arms displayed here for the surname Bruno did not include a motto.

SHIELD

Shields (or Escutcheons) at first were painted simply with one or more bands of color or 'ordinaries'. Later, the ordinaries were used in conjunction with other figures or symbols. The Coat of Arms for the surname Bruno can be described as follows:

BRUNO ARMS
A blue shield with a gold bend.

BLUE SHIELD

Azure (derived from the French word for "blue") represents the color of an eastern sky on a clear day. It also corresponds to the metal tin. The word, "azure" was introduced from the east during the Crusades. It signifies piety and sincerity, and is equated with autumn. In engravings it is represented by horizontal lines.

Symbolic Virtues: Blue denotes calmness and power of reflection. It infers nobility of the soul and signifies Loyalty, Justice and Courage. The color has also long been associated with purity and love, since the times when brides wore blue ribbons to the chapel.

Precious Stone: Turquoise

Planet: Jupiter

Obligations: Help for the servant

GOLD

"Or" (from the French word for gold) is the tincture of Gold, or in heraldic terms "or," was considered the noblest color.

One of only two metals used in heraldry, it exceeds all others in value, purity and finesse. It represents the light of the sun, and was once borne only by princes. Gold is said to gladden the heart and destroy all works of magic. It is also associated with excellence and achievement, and the bearer surpasses all others in valor.

It is represented on coats of arms by the color yellow, and in engravings by a dotted pattern.

BEND

The bend is a broad, diagonal band across the shield representing either a scarf worn like a sash, or the shield suspender of a knight or military commander. It has often been granted to those who have distinguished themselves as commodores.

The bend signifies defense and protection, and is "a bearing of of high honour, and probably represents either the scarf of the shield suspender of a knight or military commander. It was, like most other bearings, at first assumed by men of knightly and military rank, and it has since often been granted by the heralds to those who have distinguished themselves as commanders. " (Wade)

Unless it is specified otherwise the bend is assumed to go from the upper left corner (dexter, chief in heraldic terms) of a shield to the lower right (sinister base).

The Bend Sinister follows the opposite diagonal and is equally as honourable as the Bend Dexter and denotes the "badge of honour for a commander. A great many people who have paid no attention to heraldry speak of the 'bend sinister' as though it meant a mark of illegitimacy, but it is really nothing of the kind. " (Wade)

According to old theorists the bend should occupy one third of the surface of a shield, though it is usually drawn slightly more narrowly than this. A charge half the width of a bend is termed a bendlet, and if six or eight of these pieces occurs on a shield it is termed 'bendy.'

The bend sinister has been used occasionally as a mark of illegitimacy though this is not commonly the case. More often a bendlet sinister is used, or a baton sinister, which is a bendlet that does not extend to the very edges of the shield.

THE CREST

The Crest was worn on top of the helmet, and was usually made of wood, metal, or boiled leather. It provided the double advantage of easy identification and the addition of height to the wearer. If a family had no crest, and many chose not to, plumes (feathers) were often displayed instead.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Here is a listing of some of the sources consulted when researching Italian surnames. The resources below directly or indirectly influenced the authors of our surname histories. We have most of these titles in our library, others we have borrowed or had access to. Source materials have been chosen for their reliability and authenticity. Our research into surnames is ongoing, and we are continually adding to our source library. For each surname history, we seek and refer to sources specific to the surname; these are generally not included in the list below.
